Listening — Paper 1 Practice

How to use the Listening section — read this first

> There are no audio files in this pack. These five sets are script-based on purpose. You need one other person, or your phone's read-aloud (text-to-speech), to read the script out loud once while you answer. Nothing here is a transcript of a recording we supply, because we do not supply one.

Run each set like the real paper

- Cover the script. Read only the questions first — about 45 seconds.
- One reading only, at normal speaking speed. No pausing, no repeats.
- Answer as it is read. Write the gap-fill words exactly as you hear them; spelling counts.
- Mark with the key, then read the script yourself and find the line that proves each answer.

The trap MUET listening loves

Speakers correct themselves — "not the ground floor, the second floor", "Thursday, sorry, Wednesday". The corrected detail is the answer and the first version is the distractor. Every set below contains at least one of these. If you write the first thing you hear, you will lose those marks every time.

If you are practising alone

- Use your phone's read-aloud on the script at normal speed — set it once and do not touch it.
- Or record yourself reading the script on a different day, then use your own recording later.
- Never read the script silently while answering. Recognising written English is a different skill from catching spoken English, and only one of them is being tested.

Listening Set 1 - Campus Briefing for New Students

There is no audio file. Ask a friend to read the script aloud once at a steady speed (or use your phone's read-aloud tool) while you cover the script and answer.

Monologue - a student services officer at a university briefing

Good morning, everyone, and welcome to Bukit Meranti University. My name is Puan Sharifah, and I look after student services on this campus. Please listen carefully, because I will not repeat these details.

First, your student card. Collection starts this Thursday - sorry, not Thursday, Wednesday. The office changed it last night, so please write Wednesday in your notebook. Cards will be given out at Counter 3 of the Administration Building, between nine in the morning and four in the afternoon. Bring your offer letter and one passport-sized photograph. If your photograph is missing, the counter cannot print your card on the spot.

Second, the library. The main library opens at eight every weekday and closes at ten at night. During the first two weeks only, the third floor is closed for rewiring, so the quiet study zone has moved temporarily to the second floor. Group discussion rooms may be booked online, but each booking is limited to two hours a day for each student.

Third, transport. The blue campus bus circles the hostels and the lecture halls every twenty minutes, and it is free. The red bus goes to the town centre and costs one ringgit each way. You must pay with a card, because the drivers do not carry change.

Fourth, and this one matters, the health clinic. It sits behind Block D, next to the sports hall. Walk-in hours are from ten to twelve, and appointments are handled through the student portal, not by telephone. Many of you telephoned last year and nobody answered, so please use the portal.

Finally, a reminder about the orientation quiz. It is not graded, but attendance is recorded, and students who miss two sessions will be asked to attend a replacement session in week four. If you still have questions after this briefing, come to Counter 3 and speak to us there. Thank you, and enjoy your first week.

Listening Set 2 - A Problem at the Library Counter

No audio is supplied. Have two people read the two parts aloud once, or let a text-to-speech tool read the whole script while you answer from listening only.

Dialogue - a student and a library counter officer

Aiman: Good afternoon. I received a message saying I have an overdue book, but I am quite sure I returned it last week.

Encik Rahim: Let me check. Your matric number, please.

Aiman: It is B two four zero nine one.

Encik Rahim: Thank you. Yes, here it is. The book is Coastal Ecology of Malaysia. Our system says it was due on the fourth of March.

Aiman: The fourth? I borrowed it on the fourth.

Encik Rahim: You are right, my apologies. You borrowed it on the fourth, and it was due on the eighteenth. Today is the twenty-second, so the record shows four days late.

Aiman: But I dropped it into the return box outside the entrance.

Encik Rahim: The box outside is emptied only once a day, at eight in the morning. If you put a book in after eight, it is recorded the next morning. Still, that would explain one day, not four.

Aiman: Could someone have left it at the counter?

Encik Rahim: Possibly. Let me search the trolley behind me. Ah. Here it is, on the second shelf, and it was never scanned in. The fault is ours. I will cancel the fine now.

Aiman: Thank you. That is a relief.

Encik Rahim: While you are here, would you like to book a discussion room?

Aiman: Yes, room six, if it is free on Friday morning.

Encik Rahim: Room six is taken until eleven. Room nine is empty from nine.

Aiman: Then room nine, from nine to eleven, please.

Encik Rahim: Done. One more thing: bring your student card on the day. Without it, the door will not open.

Aiman: Understood. And is food allowed inside the room?

Encik Rahim: Water only. Anything else, and the cleaner will report the room.

Aiman: Fair enough. Thank you very much for your help.

Encik Rahim: You are welcome. Please tell your friends about the eight o'clock rule, because we explain it twenty times a week.

Listening Set 3 - The Rooftop Vegetable Garden

No recording is included. Read the interview aloud once, or ask two people to take the two voices, and answer without looking back at the text.

Dialogue - a radio presenter interviewing a young urban farmer

Presenter: My guest today is Nurul Hakimah, who grows vegetables on a rooftop in Penang. Nurul, how did all this begin?

Nurul: It began as a school project in 2019 - sorry, 2018. I always mix those two up. It was 2018, my final year at school.

Presenter: And what was the project about?

Nurul: Food waste. We were told to solve a local problem. We collected fruit peel from the market and turned it into compost. Then we needed somewhere to use the compost, and the only free space in the building was the roof.

Presenter: How large is the garden today?

Nurul: About four hundred square metres. We grow kangkung, sawi, chillies and, lately, cherry tomatoes. The tomatoes are the fussiest.

Presenter: Why are they fussy?

Nurul: They suffer in heat above thirty-five degrees, and a concrete roof holds heat all day. So we shade them with netting from eleven to three.

Presenter: Who does the daily work?

Nurul: Twelve volunteers, mostly retired neighbours. They come in pairs, one pair each day. Honestly, the retired ones are far more punctual than the students.

Presenter: Do you sell what you grow?

Nurul: Half of it is sold on Saturday mornings at the void deck downstairs. The other half is given to two soup kitchens nearby. We do not deliver; people must come and collect.

Presenter: What has been the hardest part?

Nurul: Water. We depend on rain, and we store it in two tanks. In a dry month we have to buy water, and that is when the sums stop working.

Presenter: So what would help you most?

Nurul: A third rainwater tank on the north side. Not more land, not more volunteers, not more seedlings. Storage. Everyone offers us seedlings; nobody ever offers us a tank.

Presenter: That is a useful thing for listeners to hear. Thank you, Nurul.

Nurul: Thank you for having me.
