Hey!
Guess what? Remember the injured stray dog I found near a shelter beside my school last month? His name is Max now! We've adopted him, and he's the sweetest. He's getting better, and he follows me everywhere. The vet says he'll fully recover soon.
Can't wait for you to meet him!

2 What can we understand about Max from the message?

A He is a trained pet from a shelter.

B He was injured but is now improving.

C He was adopted from a veterinary clinic.

Part 2

Questions 9 to 18

Read the text below and choose the best word for each space. For each question, mark the correct letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet.

Ancient Ocean Guardian

Marine turtles have existed for over 100 million years, surviving natural (0) _____ that wiped out the dinosaurs. Yet today, many species are (9) _____ threat due to human activities. These ancient creatures play a vital role in maintaining healthy ocean ecosystems by controlling jellyfish populations and supporting seagrass beds, but their numbers have been (10) _____ by pollution, climate change, and illegal hunting.

One of the most serious threats is plastic waste, which turtles often (11) _____ for jellyfish, a common part of their diet. Ingesting plastic can cause blockages, internal injuries, or even (12) _____ death to the turtles. Additionally, some coastal developments also destroy certain critical areas where female turtles (13) _____ their eggs. Without safe, undisturbed beaches, fewer hatchlings survive to adulthood, making it harder for populations to recover.

Today, many countries around the world realise this issue and take part in conservation efforts to (14) _____ these threats through stronger laws, habitat restoration, and public education campaigns. Scientists also tag turtles with satellite devices to (15) _____ their migration patterns, providing valuable insights into where they feed, mate, and nest.

Temperature plays an important role in determining the male or female turtle hatchlings: warmer sands typically (16) _____ more females, while cooler sands produce more males. With global temperatures rising, the imbalance in hatchling genders could (17) _____ the future population stability of certain species.

Protecting marine turtles is not just about saving one animal; it is about preserving the balance of the entire ocean ecosystem. If turtles disappear, many other species would be affected too. By reducing pollution, respecting wildlife laws, and supporting conservation programs, we can all contribute to (18) _____ biodiversity and a healthier planet.

Part 3

Questions 19 to 26

You are going to read a story about Irfan Lim, a robotic genius. For questions 19-26, choose the correct answer (A, B, C, or D) and mark the correct letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet.

Irfan Lim was a fourteen-year-old robotics genius who lived in Cyberjaya, Malaysia's technology hub. He attended the prestigious Malaysia Institute of Technology despite his young age, thanks to his exceptional talent for creating robots. His older brother, Hakim, was a final-year student at the same university and often encouraged Irfan's inventions. Hakim was everything Irfan wanted to be – brilliant, popular, and confident. The brothers had lived with their Aunt Faridah since their parents passed away years earlier.

One night, Hakim took Irfan to the university's robotics lab to show him something special. There, Hakim revealed his latest creation – a healthcare robot called Bayu. Unlike other robots, which can be defensive, Bayu was designed with a friendly, non-threatening appearance, like a large white balloon with simple black eyes. Hakim had programmed Bayu with thousands of medical procedures and given him a caring personality. The robot could scan anyone and provide immediate healthcare assistance.

Tragedy struck that same night when a mysterious fire broke out in the laboratory building. Hakim rushed back inside to save his research and never returned. The authorities ruled it an accident, but Irfan was devastated by the loss of his brother.

Weeks after the funeral, Irfan discovered Bayu in his room, apparently brought home by Hakim before the fire. When Irfan accidentally activated the robot, Bayu immediately scanned him and diagnosed his emotional distress. The healthcare robot began looking after Irfan, attempting to help him recover from his grief.

While testing Bayu's capabilities, Irfan discovered a microchip in his brother's lab coat. The chip contained information about strange experiments and referenced a company called Mega Technology Industries. When Irfan inserted the chip into his computer, it revealed a hidden laboratory where Hakim's research was being used without permission.

Committed to investigating his brother's work, Irfan decided to upgrade Bayu with defensive capabilities to protect them. He was joined by his university friends: Zara, a chemistry expert; Rizal, a mechanical engineering student; Danish, a speed-loving transportation specialist; and Lily, who specialised in electromagnetic technology. Together, they formed a team to uncover the truth about Hakim's research.

The team discovered that Professor Ahmad, a respected technology leader, was secretly using Hakim's research to build dangerous microbots. These tiny robots could form any shape and cause massive destruction when controlled by a neural transmitter. Professor Ahmad had started the laboratory fire to steal Hakim's work and eliminate any competition.

Part 5

Questions 33 to 40

Here are six people sharing their views on giving freedoms while managing expectations. Read the texts below and answer the questions that follow.

Giving Freedoms While Managing Expectations

A - Maria, 16

I think teenagers need freedom to grow. My parents let me choose my hobbies, and that helps me feel trusted. But they still expect good grades and respect. It's not always easy, but I understand their rules. Freedom with clear expectations helps me become more responsible. Without rules, I might not take life seriously.

B - Janne, 15

In my opinion, too much control is bad. I want freedom to make my own choices. At the same time, I know my parents want the best for me. They expect me to study hard and be polite. I think it's fair if freedom comes with trust. If I break that trust, I understand I'll lose some freedom.

C - Aisyah, 17

Freedom is important for learning. When I make mistakes, I learn from them. My parents let me go out with friends, but they expect me to come home on time. I think that's a good balance. I feel more confident and grown-up when they give me space but still guide me with clear rules.

D - Leo, 19

Sometimes, I feel like adults don't understand how much freedom we want. I know they worry about us, but being too strict can push teens away. I believe we need space to make small mistakes. If parents explain their expectations kindly, it's easier to follow them. Freedom and respect should go both ways.

E - Emma, 16

I believe freedom with limits is the best way to grow. If I only did what I wanted, I might forget what's important. My parents let me choose my own clothes and friends, but they expect me to be honest and kind. I like that they trust me. It makes me want to do better.

F - Daniel, 18

I think teenagers should have some freedom to choose their path. For example, I enjoy art more than science, and my parents support that. But they also expect me to do my best in all subjects. It's not always fun, but I understand their point. Freedom is great, but without goals, it's easy to waste time.
