Bodyguards

There have been many movies, novels and web series which have been (0) centred around bodyguards. More often than not, these are high-packed action flicks though some may (9) _____ romance too. But what exactly does a bodyguard do? Well, obviously the first job of a bodyguard is to make sure that no harm comes to his or her client.

Her? Yes, today many bodyguards are women because they are more inconspicuous, and many attackers do not think they are a threat. In fact, because other parts of the (10) _____ are more important than physical strength, women make very good bodyguards.

Most bodyguards have military backgrounds and others come from government agencies which have the job of protecting (11) _____ politicians. These days some private companies offer training for bodyguards.

Bodyguards do not have any special privileges under the law. They are only allowed to carry guns or other weapons in very (12) _____ circumstances. And if they injure or kill anybody (13) _____ the course of their work, they will have the same problems with the police as any other person would have.

People need bodyguards for different reasons. Celebrities are (14) _____ in danger of attacks from haters, and need protection as do some politicians with controversial reputations. Finally, wealthy people (15) _____ bodyguards for their children to avoid the risk of kidnapping.

The job of the bodyguard is to get between the client and an attacker. (16) _____ a good bodyguard will try to prevent that by changing the client's routine and security to make attacks less likely.

It is not a popular career option. Many bodyguards get injured at work, but most injuries are (17) _____. Serious attacks on a person's life are infrequent, and the biggest problem a bodyguard faces is to (18) _____ constantly alert. Having a client harmed because of inattention is a great disgrace for a bodyguard.

Part 3

You are going to read an extract from a story. For questions 19 to 26, choose the correct answer (A, B, C or D) and mark the correct letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet.

1 After a dozen steps, I began to feel myself sinking into the soft sand. I tried to jump free, but I began to sink deeper. "Oh no! What is happening?" I began to feel frightened and panicky. In seconds, it was up to my knees. I couldn't do anything now. I tried to get up and free myself, but it seemed to get worse. I suddenly realised that I was sinking into quicksand!

2 I was shocked. There was nothing on the beach to suggest that it was soft or dangerous. Old fishermen knew very well that the swirling of river or tidal current sometimes dig out empty holes or hollows that are filled with soft sediments like sand. They are believed to have a big appetite, for they have swallowed fishermen, horses and carts, motorbikes, and even dump trucks. But I don't believe that. What I know is that you don't sink in quicksand until you are almost covered up. Humans and animals typically float in water, so if you are standing upright, the furthest you will sink in the quicksand is waist deep. If the quicksand is near a river or coastal area, you can still drown the old-fashioned way when the tide comes in, but you won't choke with a mouthful of sand or mud.

I had also read long ago that farmers who got stuck in quicksand while rounding sheep would spreadeagle, that is, lying with arms and legs spread out. This is to spread your weight so you would not sink immediately. But with the sand up to my thighs, I knew it was too late to work out. "My God, I'm being swallowed," I thought. "The sand is eating me alive!"

3 Yelling for help seemed hopeless. Nobody would hear me. There was no one around. If they were, they would be miles away. Almost in a panic state, I started to imagine myself being choked to death as my nose and throat were filled with sand. I had lost hope. "I'll disappear and nobody will ever know what happened to me."

4 Perhaps if I remained very still, I might delay the slow death. Help might even arrive before it was too late. But I continued to sink; now above my knees, then another centimetre and another. I tried to hold my breath. I then tried to wriggle my toes, but my feet seemed stiff like concrete. Only when the sand climbed to my waist did I stop sinking. Although my body was still motionless, my brain was spinning. And suddenly, I had a frightening thought. "Where is the tide? When will it come in again?"

5 I remembered that the tide was going out when I reached the beach, which meant it wouldn't be back for another nine or ten hours. "I've got a chance after all!" I told myself with relief. Surely, help would come within the next few hours. Or would it? I told myself to remain positive and pray for the best.

6 I still must do something and not just wait for help which might never come. I didn't like the idea of drowning or being swallowed alive. I began to scoop away the sand around my waist. But as fast as I dug, the sand came back into place. After an hour, my fingers were numb and sore, my legs were raging with cramps. I stopped digging.

7 Then I heard a roar like a waterfall. Moments later, there was a downpour. Soaked in seconds, I buried my face in my hands and bowed my head. Trapped in the jaws of sand, there was nothing more I could do.

8 At the first break of dawn, I shouted again for help. I was tired and weak as I became more hopeless. I was worried about the incoming tide. For nine hours, I had been struggling in the sand, motionless, cold and hungry. I tried humming to keep my body warm. There was not a soul to be seen. Still, I kept on shouting and shouting until I lost my voice. What else could I do? I learnt later that my shouting could be heard two miles away.

19 In paragraph 2, why are the ‘hollows’ described as having a big appetite?

A They do not stop eating.

B Nothing can float on them.

C They are forever hollow inside.

D They eat anything that comes along.

20 In paragraph 3, why didn't the writer 'spreadeagle' to delay sinking?

A He was sinking gradually.
B His legs got stuck in the sand.
C He was already buried up to his knees.
D The quicksand was too soft for him to do so.

21 In paragraph 3, the writer did not cry out for help because

A he was deeply buried.
B he was choked by the sand.
C he was very far out of hearing.
D his voice was drowned by the wind.

22 In paragraph 4, when did the sinking stop?

A When he remained still
B When the tide subsided
C When he was half buried
D When the quicksand stopped shifting

23 In paragraph 4, why did the writer have a frightening thought ?

A Night would approach soon.
B No help seemed to be coming.
C It would be too cold for him to survive.
D The tide would be coming in to drown him.

24 What evidence is there to show that the 'frightening thought' gave way to a feeling of comfort?

A The tide was still subsiding.
B A very bad storm had struck.
C Help would come when dawn struck.
D The tide would take nine hours to come in.

25 In paragraph 7, what is the effect of scooping away the sand?

A His fingers became sore.
B His legs became cramp.
C He was buried deeper into the quicksand.
D What he scooped away was quickly filled up.

26 Which of the following best summarizes the last paragraph?

A Facing a sure death
B Praying for a miracle
C Calling for help repeatedly
D A cry that will not be heard
