PART 3

Questions 19 to 26 are based on the following passage

Read the passage carefully and choose the correct answer (A, B, C or D)

Electricity is one of the most important inventions in human history. It powers almost every aspect of modern life, from lighting and communication to transportation and industrial production. Without electricity, we would not have the everyday comforts and technology we depend on.

Electricity is a form of energy resulting from the movement of electrons. It can be generated in various ways, including through the burning of fossil fuels such as coal, oil and natural gas. However, because these fuels harm the environment, more people are turning to renewable energy. These include solar power, wind energy, hydroelectric dams and geothermal energy. These alternatives are not only better for the planet, but they also help reduce pollution and combat climate change.

The journey of electricity begins at power plants, where it is generated and then travels long distances through high-voltage cables. It eventually reaches homes, schools, hospitals and businesses, enabling people to carry out tasks with speed and efficiency. In fact, most daily activities depend on a constant supply of electricity. We use it to cook food, refrigerate food, clean clothes, study and entertain ourselves. In industries, electricity powers machines and technology, helping boost the economy and productivity.

Despite its many advantages, electricity must be used with caution. Improper handling of electrical appliances or exposure to faulty wiring can result in serious accidents, such as electric shocks or even fires. Using electrical appliances incorrectly or having bad wiring can cause serious accidents like shocks or fires.

Another important issue is energy conservation. Although electricity is widely available in many parts of the world, it is still a limited resource in others. Furthermore, the overuse of electricity leads to higher energy consumption and increased pollution, especially if it comes from non-renewable sources. To save electricity, we can adopt simple habits like switching off lights and fans when they are not needed, unplugging devices after use and choosing energy-efficient appliances.

Governments and organizations around the world are also encouraging the use of green technologies. Innovations such as electric vehicles and solar panels are becoming more popular. These not only reduce our dependence on fossil fuels but also promote a cleaner, healthier environment.

In conclusion, electricity is an essential part of modern life. It has transformed the way we live, work and interact with the world around us. As users, we must learn to appreciate its value, use it responsibly and support eco-friendly ways to generate electricity. By doing so, we can ensure that future generations will continue to benefit from the power of electricity without harming the planet.

24. How does promoting the use of renewable energy sources help support electricity conservation efforts?

A. It increases dependence on fossil fuels.
B. It encourages people to use more electricity.
C. It reduces the need for non-renewable sources.
D. It reduces the use of technology in daily life and saves electricity.

25. The adoption of solar panels can be considered beneficial because
A. it is promoted by governments and organizations worldwide.
B. it supports environmental well-being and sustainability.
C. it is a popular alternative to many countries.
D. it makes energy consumption less efficient.

26. How does supporting sustainable methods of electricity generation impact both the environment and society in the long term?

A. It helps protect natural resources and ensures clean energy.
B. It increases pollution and eco-friendly alternatives.
C. It reduces the need for any electricity use today.
D. It makes electricity more reliable.
