Reply ↳ TravelBug: Level ⑤ Contributor 3 hours ago

All the malls have 'teen' fashion shops. Sungei Wang / BB Plaza, Pavillion, Suria KLCC all have a range of shops selling 'teen' fashions, clothes and clothing. Pavillion is a mid-range mall, deep pockets are not really needed - but if you do have the very deep pockets head over the other side of Jalan Bukit Bintang to Starhill Gallery.

Blog Post: Teenagers and Money

Money. It is involved with everything, which is why you can never have enough of it. In general, many people belief that friendship is more important than money. Sometimes people earn a lot of money at one time and think that it will last them for the rest of their life, or the rest of the year. I once had an experience like this, that helped me in managing my money. On my thirteenth birthday I had gained a large amount of money from friends and family. The total estimation was around five hundred ringgit. Now, I had never seen this much money before. I felt as though I would never run out of it. Throughout the week, I started spending my money. I downloaded songs from Spotify, games, and some other useless junk that would only entertain me for about a week. After spending all of my money I realized that I forgot about what I needed most. New clothes!

Ever since that day I made sure that I saved enough and spend on whatever else was important. However, even after going through this experience, it is still hard to save money for the important items. The reason it is so hard is because the world is full of entertaining objects that appeal to everyone. There are ways that we can control our money spending habits that I have learned. One way is to set up a limit of how much to spend. If you have just gained a large amount of money, you can put a good amount, that will be enough for important goods, into a bank account and only keep out a small amount that you can use on what you want. Another thing you might try is to actually think about what and why you are buying.

With these ways of controlling money tips, I have learned how to control my spending habits. If you do not spend your money wisely, you could end up in a lot of trouble.

Part 4

Read the information below and answer questions 25 to 34.
For each question, write your answer in the space provided on your answer sheet.

Trains

Trains have long been an integral part of human civilization, offering a convenient and efficient mode of transportation. Trains were first introduced in the early 19th century, and they revolutionized the way people travelled. The steam engine was invented in 1814, and it powered the first train. This invention allowed people to travel further and faster than ever before. Trains quickly became popular in Europe and America, and they began connecting large cities and towns. In the United States, the Transcontinental Railroad was completed in 1869. This allowed people to travel from the East to the West Coast in just a few days, as opposed to months by wagon or stagecoach.

As time went on, trains continued to evolve. In the early 20th century, electric and diesel engines were introduced. These engines were more efficient and quieter than steam engines, making train travel more comfortable. Trains also became faster, with speeds reaching over 300 km per hour on some modern high-speed trains.

Trains have had a significant impact on society. They have abled people to travel long distances quickly and efficiently, which has increased mobility and led to economic growth. Trains have also played a critical role in the development of infrastructure and urbanization. The establishment of railway lines necessitated the construction of bridges, tunnels, and stations, creating employment opportunities and driving technological advancements. Additionally, the location of these stations often influenced the growth and layout of cities, with rail lines becoming lifelines and vital connectors between urban centres. Many cities developed around train stations, and trains became a symbol of progress and prosperity. Trains were also used to transport goods, which led to increased trade and commerce.

In conclusion, trains have had a profound impact on human society. From their humble beginnings as steam locomotives to the advanced high-speed trains of today, they have transformed transportation, industry, and urban development. As we look towards the future, trains will continue to evolve, bringing about new possibilities and opportunities for the betterment of society.
